WASHINGTON, Sept. 4 (AFP) - A top Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) official suspected of being the mastermind behind several bank holdups has been under surveillance for two years but has not been suspended from duty because of lack of proof, the justice department said Friday.

The department, reacting to a story in the Columbus Citizen journal newspaper of Ohio. confirmed that the unidentified official was being investigated. Deputy Attorney-General Rudolph Giuliani told a news conference that the justice department had not

Iraq says 4 ships bombed in Kharg

BEIRUT, Sept. 4 (R) — Iraq said Saturday that its navy and air force had destroyed four ships in the Gulf, including two tankers sailing toward Iran's main oil terminal on Kharg

But a senior Iranian Oil Ministry official contacted from Bahrain denied that any vessels had been sunk near Kharg Island. He also said he understood no ships had been damaged at the Iranian port of Bandar Khomeini, where Iraq said it destroyed the other two

Iraq and Iran have been at war for two years. With fighting on land deadlocked, Iraq has recently launched a campaign to hit the Iranian economy by blockading Kharg Island. A blockade of Bandar Khomeini has officially been in force since the start of the Reuter correspondent Maamoun Youssef reported from Baghdad that the Iraqi announcement came in a statement by a military spokesman broadcast on state television. The spokesman said: "Our armed forces have started the implementation of the warning to bomb oil tankers that approach the prohibited military zone in the Kharg area and the Iranian shore.

"We will continue this policy until the Iranian enemy respects the will of the Iraqi people and its sovereignty over its land and until the Iranians agree to end the war," the spokesman added. His statement was also published by the official Iraqi news agency.

lraq declared a military exclusion zone at the head of the Gulf Aug. 12, saying that any ships entering an area along the Iranian coast would be liable to attack. Iraq had instructed shipping to stay away from the general area since the early days of the Gulf war in September 1980. But it set out the exact location of the exclusion zone after it sank two ships, one Greek and one South Korean, near Bandar Khomeini.

Later in the month, President Saddam Hussein repeated his country's warnings and singled out the oil terminal and installations at Kharg Island. "Foreign shipping companies have only themselves to blame if their ships approach this place," he said.

Saturday's Iraqi announcement gave no details of the nationality of the ships destroyed. Western industry sources estimated that last month's Iraqi warnings succeeded, perhaps temporally, in dragging ltanian oil output below the total of nearly 2.4 million barrels daily registered in July.

The Iraqi actions scared off some tanker owners and made Iranian oil more expensive.

Chiesa murder shocks Italians

PALERMO, Sicily, Sept. 4 (AP) — Italians across political lines reacted Saturday with shock and dismay to the murder of Italy's top Mafia fighter, Gen. Carlo Alberto Dalla Chiesa, and his wife, gunned down in an ambush here Friday.

Two unknown extremist groups claimed responsibility for the killings, but prosecutors said they were convinced that Dalla Chiesa. 61, was killed by Mafia gunmen. "It's a classic Mafia job," said one investigator who asked not to be identified.

President Sandro Pertini returned to Rome after cutting short his vacation in northern Italy. He and Premier Giovanni Spadolini later flew to Palermo to attend the funeral scheduled for later in the day. Before beading for Palermo, Spadolini won a vote of confidence from the Senate for his five-party coalition, the 42nd post-war cabinet formed last week. The vote was 177-115. Last Thursday, he won a similar confidence vote from the Chamber of

An unspecified number of gunmen riding in a car opened automatic fire on Dalla Chiesa's automobile while riding through a central street of this Sicilian capital. Chiesa, whose campaign against terrorism earned him a reputation for toughness, was appointed as prefect of Palermo in February. As prefect, he was the central government's representative in Palermo and headed the city's police force.

Building fire kills 18

LOS ANGELES. Sept. 4 (AP) - Fire swept through a four-story apartment building early Saturday killing 18 persons and injuring at least 18, officials said.

The blaze, which broke out at 4:27 a.m. local time, sent flames leaping from the third and fourth floors of the building, said fire spokesman Jim Wells. Firefighters brought the fire under control at 5:47 a.m. Five juveniles and four infants were among the dead, said fire spokesman Ed Reed.

Nineteen companies of firefighters and eight ambulance crews were sent to the scene. and firefighters did not get the upper hand against the blaze until about an hour after the first alarm, Wells said. Wells said the 18 injured were taken to hospitals for treatment for smoke inhalation and burns.

held "great danger" for Israel and "should not even be debated by the government." Sharon expressed his astonishment that Reagan's proposals "which directly affect Israel's security and future" should have been presented first to Arab countries with no prior consultation with the Israelis. "The United States could have saved itself a lot of embarrassment and frustration, because after one concludes plans like this with other states, it's much harder to back down, and in the end the Unitd States will have no choice but to back down, because its plan cannot be implemented." he said.

Sharon said "any intervention from the outside to impose a solution is a grave and regrettable mistake and it will not succeed. There is no chance that anyone can force such a solution on Israel from the outside." Israel has strongly rejected Reagan's proposals as a deviation from the Camp David Accords, the only peacemaking framework Israel recognizes. It has called Reagan's demand for a freeze on Jewish settlement construction in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, and the linking of these territories to Jordan, a formula for a PLO-led state near Israel.

Sharon reiterated his claim that Jordan itself was a Palestinian state, a contention Washington does not accept. He said Israel should be allowed "to extract the full benefit of ... the expulsion of the commands", from Beirut. He said this had removed the PLO threat from the West Bank and would enable more moderate Palestinians to come forward and discuss autonomy for the West Bank and Gaza as Israel envisions it.

"For the first time, there is a chance of starting a dialogue with the (West Bank and Gaza) Arabs." he said. "There is no reason not to talk and try to reach solutions in keeping with the proposal made by Israel." for autonomy.

He said he expected the issue to lead to "a test of wills' between Washington and Tel Aviv, but added that Israel had survived them in the past and would survive them in the Israel radio quoted Reagan as having written to Prime Minister Menahem Begin that he would "stand by my plan despite the protests heard from Israel." On Lebanon, Sharon said that if the Lebanese government did not sign a peace treaty with Israel "we must consider the possibility of placing South Lebanon up to a depth of 40 to 45 kilometers from the truce lines under a special status ensuring our security. This does not necessarily mean that we would keep troops there." Observers said Sharon was probably thinking of leaving forces loyal to Israel's Lebanese ally Maj. Saad Haddad in control of this border region. 6 African states discuss Namibia

Negotiations have been hampered by a South African demand that any settlement should be linked with a withdrawal from Angola of an estimated 18,000 Cuban troops. Angola, Namibia's northern neighbor which houses SWAPO's main rear bases, has said it needs the Cubans to safeguard its security. It has accused South Africa of planning a major offensive in the southern province of Cunene.

The front-line leaders made no formal opening remarks before beginning their meeting and it was not immediately know whether there would be a final communique or a news conference. Zambian government sources said Friday that the summit would also discuss other issues, including alleged South African attempts to destabilize some of WASHINGTON, Sept. 4 (AP) - The U.S. government denied Israeli charges Friday that President Reagan had consulted with Arabs but not Israel before his speech announcing a new Middle East initiative.

"The plan was not run by (presented to) the Arab countries first." State Department spokesman John Hughes told reporters. He said that Israeli leaders got exactly the same consultations as did Arab leaders. The Israeli cabinet has alleged Reagan consulted with Jordan, Saudi Arabia and Egypt. but not Israel, before presenting his plan.

In response to questions, Hughes emphatically denied allegations by some Israeli officials that the United States violated its written commitment to Israel to consult in advance on major policy initiatives.

One U.S. official disclosed. however, that Nicholas Veliotes, the assistant secretary of state for Near Eastern affairs, was in Jordan shortly before the Reagan speech. When asked if there had been a meeting between Veliotes and Jordan's King Hussein, a potentially key player in any overall Middle East peace settlement, the official replied, "I think there was."

Veliotes, a former U.S. ambassador to Jordan, is considered close to Hussein and a key formulator of Middle East policy, diplomatic sources here said. U.S. officials have said previously that the pre-speech contacts with Middle East governments were handled by the American ambassadors in each country.

Diplomatic sources in Washington said Israel and the Arab countries involved were advised of the contents of the speech in advance. Begin, who was on vacation, called the emergency cabinet meeting on receiving the first of two letters from Reagan outlining the new policy. Sources said he received a second letter from Reagan after his angry response to the first and still before the preisdent's speech.

Hughes asserted that "the views presented by Reagan are positions which have long been part of the public record or which have

Women's branch banks gain ground, succeed

By Omar Basaddig Riyadh Bureau

RIYADH, Sept. 4 — The concept of separate banking services for women has been gaining ground here due to the fact that the principle upholds Islamic principles forbidding the free intermingling of men and women who are not blood relations, while at the same time allowing a woman independence in the management of her financial affairs.

It has now been two years since the opening of the first women's branch by one of the local banks, and the pact that several other banks have followed suit makes it plain that the idea is increasingly gaining ground and meeting with success. In fact, some of the financial houses which do not come under the statutory meaning of a bank have also opened women's branches as part of their institutions.

In the beginning, the exercise had its teething troubles: resistance, lack of confidence and simple inertia. But now it has become firmly established, more and more women are making use of the services offered and the benefits occuring from them are being appreciated all-round. Only a few days ago the Arabic daily Aljarirah conducted a survey of women's branches of a number of banks. One of the things that appears to be common to almost all such branches is that their profit margins are minimal. The service motive is a more dominant one than the profit motive. It seems that some banks have been set up just in order to keep up with the Joneses, at least that was the verdict of some of the women executives of those branches who were interviewed during the survey. Izzat Muhammad of the Cairo Bank said that officials (women) from her branch pay visits to women's colleges and other institutions to educate and enlighten the women there on the importance of wealth in life. She added that her bank goes as far as buying shares for its women customers and patrons, and appealed to women welfare societies to make use of the services pro-

The National Commercial Bank says that it provides all banking services to its women patrons, just as it does to men. It pays particular attention to those of its patrons who are business enterpreneurs, women who have set up such ventures as boutiques, dress-making establishments, etc. A few have in fact made use of the bank's facilities for importation, such as the opening of letters of credit.

The bank, which is said to be the initiator of the idea of women's banking, says that one of their more enterpreneurial women patrons asked them to organize an exhibition for her business merchandise, bathroom and other plumbing appliances, which they did quite successfully. The bank is planning a women's seminar for next year on the subject of financial management.

A spokesman for the bank said that the women's branch has enabled many women to deal with their financial problems indpendently, and, moreover, some Saudi Arabian women have become very helpful to their husbands as a result of the expert advice and enlightenment gained through the women's

The remittance abroad of the allowances for Saudi Arabian children studying away from home is now increasingly done by the mothers and sisters of these students.

While the patrons of the bank's women's branches come from all walks of life, teachers, nurses, students and housewives, the bank strives to teach all of them the benefits of thrift and the avoidance of expensive and unnecessary extra-vagance, particularly on the part of the womenfolk and

In this regard a "Stick-a-Stamp," campaign has been started by the bank and is aimed mainly at the children. The stamps, in denominations of SR2 and SR5 ae affixed on a colorful pictorial book provided by the bank. and when the total value of the stamps affixed has reached SR200 the bank opens a savings account in the child's name.

Suzan Aziz of the Saudi-American Bank's women's branch said that her branch lay more stress on enlightening their women patrons on the various functions and activities of the bank and its role in the economic life of a nation. Apart from inculcating in their patrons the significance of saving, they also instruct them in how to strike a balance between ones income and expenditures. The branch also gives advice to its patrons on how to invest their funds and benefit from them. rather than squandering them or hoarding them at home where they yield nothing.

Those women with limited incomes, the working women, are given advice on, among other things, how to strike a balance between spending and saving. Aziz believes that the end result of all these activities is that society as a whole benefits, and not just the womenfolk.

As Israelis pull back

Lebanese Army assumes control of key positions

BEIRUT, Sept. 4 (AP) — Israeli troops began pulling out Saturday from positions south of Beirut that they have held for months, leaving the posts to the Lebanese Army. In a ceremony at 12:45 p.m. (1045GMT) Lebanese Army soldiers raised their country's red and white flag over the Henry Chehab barracks on the airport highway about 9 kms south of Beirut's central business district. #### Pakistan, Soviet Union set for talks

ISLAMABAD, Sept. 4 (AP) -Pakistan-Soviet talks on bilateral relations and the regional situation will start early next week in Moscow, a foreign ministry spokesman said Saturday. Pakistani Foreign Secretary Niaz A. Naik is to fly to Moscow Tuesday for the two-day talks. He is returning the August 1981 visit to Pakistan by Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Nikolai Firyubin.

The spokesman said the two sides are expected to discuss the Afghanistan situation against the backdrop of last June's talks between representatives of lslamabad and out of the science building of the government-run Lebanese University almost 10 kms south of the city's center. The Israelis captured that area within weeks after they invaded Lebanon on June 6.

At the same time, the Lebanese Army was gathering up ammunition from the basement armories in business and apartment buildings that Palestinian commandos had controlled

The Israeli pullback from long-held positions came on the last day of the plan negotiated by American envoy Philip Habib for the evacuation of the Palestinians from their enclave in West Beirut.

Just the day before Israel's withdrawal from the positions near the airport, Israeli soldiers had actually moved forward about 400 meters to the edge of the Sabra refugee camp that had been a Palestinian stronghold.

Spurred by the Israeli move, leftist Lebanese militiamen reappeared on the streets with automatic weapons and artillery threatening to upset the plan for disarming Beirut. By Saturday morning, however, the Israeli soldiers were gone from their positions near the Sabra camp.

The government radio said Lebanese Prime Minister Shafiq Wazzan had complained to U.S. Ambassador Robert Dillon that the Israeli move forward was a violation of the Beirut ceasefire agreement.

ers were evacuated starting late last month. An authoritative source said the main obstacle now was the presence of Israeli forces in the southern part of the airport, where they

Israeli conditions for reopening the airport included their right to a presence in the control tower and at a small Lebanese Army air base nearby, examining passenger lists, and supervising all planes using the airport, the source said. #### Begin, Sharon are fascists, Kreisky says

VIENNA, Sept. 4 (AP) - Reaffirming his harsb criticism of Israel's current leaders, Chancellor Bruno Kreisky has accused Premier Menahem Begin and Defense Minister Ariel Sharon of "fascist mentality" and of practising "appartheid" in occupied territories.

In an interview broadcast by Austrian radio in Saturday's prime news program, Kreisky said, "I do not want to have anything to do with these rulers in Israel."

Asked whether Begin and Sharon were, in his opinion, fascists, Kreisky said, "To me, these men are exponents of a mentality which has rightly been called fascist in the past."

He said there was "no doubt that (under 'Israeli occupation) Palestinians are. second-rank people, there is no doubt that in Israel there exists an apartheid system (which is) at least similar to that in South Africa."

When the radio's chief editor noted in the past people like Adolf Hitler were described as being "fascist," Kreisky said there were "things in common" in so far as

W.Bank mayors react favorably to Reagan plan

TEL AVIV, Sept. 4 (Agencies) — The Arab mayor of Bethlehem and three dismissed West Bank mayors gave mostly favorable responses to President Reagan's proposals for a solution to the Palestinian issue.

Ex-mayor of Nablus Bassam Shakaa said he agreed with the head of the Palestine Liberation Organization Political Department Farouk Kaddoumi in appreciating the new elements in the Reagan plan, according to the Palestinian news agency in East Jerusalem.

Kaddoumi's view reflects that of the PLO and thus of the Palestinian people, he added. Former Mayor Ibrahim Tawil whose municipality was dissolved by the Israeli military authorities, acknowledged that the plan evidenced a "slight shift" in the American attitude, deploring on his part however what he saw as its continuing commitment to Camp David principles.

Jordan women invited to join People's Army

will have their first taste of military training in the country's recently-announced People's Army. Women have up to now been excluded from the armed forces, but Prime Minister Modar Badran, revealing plans for the militia, invited able-bodied women between the ages of 16 and 35 to join it.

Political sources in Amman said the decision to form the citizens' army reflected Jordan's anxiety over its security in the wake of the Israeli invasion of Lebanon. The militia was announced in July but it was only last week that a special committee from the regular Jordanian armed forces filled in details.

The committee said future plans provided for military training for all citizens capable of carrying arms. But for the moment all the women joining the force will be volunteers. Army recruits willalso be required to join it for further military training the committee said.

Officials here recently spoke of a possible Israeli threat to Jordan once the Lebahese crisis was resolved. King Hussein, in a speech last month marking the 30th anniversary of his accession to the throne, said Jordan was a target for Israel. But he added: "Anyone who tampers with Jordan's national unity will have no mercy from me."

Just how or when the citizens' army will function is still vague. But Badran said in a recent speech that its main objective was not to arm the people but to form a back-up to Jordan's regular armed forces, estimated at between 70,000 and 80,000 men.

The militia will be modeled on Iraq's People's Army, formed earlier this year. Badran said its ultimate aim would be to train some 100,000 men and women in the use of arms and in guerrilla warfare. Machine guns and rifles would be purchased for this purpose, he added, without saying when or from whom,

Singapore seizes pirated cassettes

SINGAPORE. Sept. 4 (AFP) - Police here have seized more than 100,000 cassette tape recordings, believed pirated, in the latest haul this year and the second biggest since an anti-piracy crackdown started early last year.

The tapes would be checked over the next few days to see if copyright had been infringed, police said. The tapes, of popular English and Malay artists, had an estimated market value of about $140,000, and may have been intended for export, police said,

No arrests were made. The seizure followed a tip-off from the International Federation of Producers of Phonograms and Videograms (IFPI), and the Singapore Phonogram and Videogram Prodiscers Association. It also followed three months of investigations. Under copyright laws here, a first time conviction for infrinegment carries a fine not exceeding $465 and for a subsequent offsense a fine of $930 with a maximum jail term of 12 months.

"It is China's hope that these provisions will be strictly observed," he said.

Hu told the congress that the United States must limit arms sales to Nationalist China (Taiwan) and the Soviet Union cease its threat" to China if both nations want to improve relations with Peking.

The report contained chapters on China's dealings with Japan, Third World identity and relations with other Communist parties.

The ICRC, whose 175 delegates are often the only outsiders allowed on humanitarian missions in war zones, argues that neutrality ensures it can continue to check on how warring countries treat their prisoners, wounded and civilians. Balmer, 33, portrays in his book the problems he had in keeping neutral while a brutal civil war raged all around him.

In interviews given before the ICRC summoned him to court, he argued that the Red Cross was exploited by repressive regimes who used its presence as proof they had nothing to hide. He declined to comment on the case, saying the court summons included an ICRC order to stop speaking to the press. "I find that rather cruious: Free speech is guaranteed in the (Swiss) constitution," he said by telephone from his home in Fribourg. The ICRC spokeswoman would not say what legal changes the Red Cross would bring and Balmer said they had not been detailed in the summons. His publisher has also been charged with publishing a book which, the ICRC argued, it should have known violated the confidentiality oath. Lawyers for the publishing company said it had not violated any Swiss laws.

ESCALATION OF GULF WAR

The advent of the third year of the Gulf war was marked vesterday by serious escalation when Iraqi planes bombed and apparently sank or damaged four foreign tankers on their way to the Iranian Kharg terminal to load oil. Iraq has been warning Iran that it would go for the jugular if no progress toward a peaceful settlement was achieved. The Iraqi blockade may succeed in scaring away foreign tankers from loading at Kharg and this may force Iran to do something equally drastic either by bombing Iraqi oil installations, invading Iragi territory or interfering with the entire oil traffic through the Strait of Hormuz.

The last option may not be easy since the Americans have a powerful fleet in the area which could easily neutralize Iranian efforts. But this in itself will be a further escalation of the conflict by sucking in the superpowers and destabilizing the region as a whole.

In desperation the Iranians might try anything to avenge themselves and hurt the Iraqis in kind. It might take the form of bombing civilian targets in Basra which has been steadily attacked since the turn of the tide in the Gulf war earlier this year. In any case, both sides stand to lose even more heavily now that the war has gone into its third year with no settlement in sight, making it the longest and most savage Islamic war in modern times. Both sides have lost a veritable army of their best men and both have lost money that could have been used to Fransform them into fast developing states. Perhaps the worst of this war is not yet over.

The story of Mexico's financial troubles reads like a myth and many may be excused if they do not believe it. Others will be justified if they decide to dismiss the whole thing as a rank example of corruption, mismanagement and sheer waste of national resources.

Until a few years ago, the country was fairly stable, looking forward to its potential oil wealth as the prescribed panacea. Then oil gushed out in abundant quantities making Mexico the fourth largest producer in the world. A lot of poor and suffering Mexicans hoped to see some light at the end of the tunnel. But the tunnel never ended and on top of the money spent or dissipated the country has borrowed eighty thousand million dollars with little or nothing to show for it. Instead of investing in their own country Mexican capitalists bought $25 billion worth of real estate in the U.S.

A great deal of the loans, and trouble, came from the U.S. which was only too ready to lend money in the hope of capitalizing on the oil boom with the result that Mexico is now reaping its own oil bust.

Saudi Arabian press review

Okaz Saturday called on Arab leaders to discuss thoroughly the new American peace plan for the Middle East and welcomed President Reagan's change of stand on the Palestine question. The paper said it was proper for Arab leaders to consider the new American peace proposals presented by President Reagan and adopt a Unified stand on them.

"Noting a "change" in Reagan's position, the paper said, "The Arabs should fully exploit this Since the American president has admitted that the Palestinian issue was no longer a refugee problem but a problem of a people who pave legitimate rights."

"Moreover, President Reagan is opposed to the annexation or permanent control of the West Sank and the Gaza Strip by Israel and most of his proposals are positive, although they do not fully comply with Arab demands," it added. The paper stressed the meed to formulate a unanimous area stand during the upcoming Arab summit.

N. Ireland gears up for political battle

By Brian Cathcart

Political battle lines are being drawn in Northern Ireland as elections approach for a new parliamentary assembly which Britain hopes will foster peace in its divided province. It will be Britain's seventh bid in a decade to break the sectarian deadlock here, but even before the Oct. 20 elections many people have written them off as a failure.

The British initiative was launched by James Prior. the latest London cabinet minister to take charge of Northern Ireland affairs, in the hope that the province's politicians could find their own way to end. the violence.

The assembly members will be charged with thrashing out a formula for a local government that will command support from both Catholics and Protestants. But after 13 bloody years in which more than 2,200 people have died, leaders on the two sides seem as bifterly divided as ever and the main Catholic Party has already decided not to take part in the assembly.

The task of bringing the two sides together has deseated successive British ministers since 1972, the bloodiest year of the "troubles." when London stepped in to abolish the Protestant-dominated Stormont parliament which had ruled for 50 years. The years that followed have seen a continued guerrilla campaign by the outlawed Irish Republican Army (IRA), which aims to sever Northern Ireland's links with Britain.

Prior, a genial English farmer and leading moderate in Britain's ruling Conservative Party, is undeterred by previous failures and present difficulties. He argues that the absence of a political forum has driven people on both sides to violence and that continued direct rule from London offers no longterm solution to the special problems on Northern

His many critics say there is a risk the assembly will only highlight divisions and increase tension. The heaviest blow to his plans came last week when the mainly Catholic Social Democratic and Labor Party (SDLP) decided to contest the elections but boycott the assembly's discussions.

The SDLP, which advocates the peaceful unification of Ireland. has traditionally been the main representative of the Catholics who make up roughly one-third of the province's 1.5 million population.

The decision, taken at a stormy meeting in the western market town of Dungannon, reflects a compromise between members who favored full participation and others who wanted an outright boycott of the Prior plan and the election, party sources said. The official party statement said the plan did not take account of the "Irish dimension" - meaning Catholic aspirations for unity with the republic - but the party position could be reconsidered if the plan was altered.

Leaders of the Protestant majority, which is fiercely loyal to Britain and hostile to any link with the predominantly Catholic republic. immediately made clear there was no question of their participation in the assembly if concessions were made to the SDLP. The apparent deadlock led many political commentators to write off the initiative as stillborn. but Prior was quick to say the elections would go

"We have laid down a framework and we will stick to that. People should take part and if they are dissatisfied with their role, then the time to put their views forward is when the assembly meets." he told a radio interviewer.

Officials on Prior's staff retain some hope the SDLP can be persuaded to take some part in the assembly discussions. "All the signs are that the assembly is not going well." said one official. "but the gamble must be taken."

They say violence appears on the wane, with 41 deaths so far this year compared with 101 in 1981 and a peak of 467 in 1972. (R)

Israelis were making it very difficult for people to cross the firing line from West to East Beirut, and Lebanese Prime Minister Wazzan and ex-Prime Minister Saeb Salam cometimes took hours and even days to deliver messages to Habib. back and forth, since Habib was not in West Beirut and we could not talk to him directly.

Therefore it was during that period when we felt that we had to make our position clear, so that the Israelis do not utilize ambiguity as an excuse and a pretext for continuing the massacres. Once we made the decision, with our Lebanese brothers that is, the Lebanese National Movement, and the prime minister. Mr. Wazzan - that we should leave Beirut, then that decision had to be carried out as soon as possible in order to achieve its objectives: to save Beirut from more destruction and killing.

During that period, from Aug. 4 until the final ceasefire, the Israelis attempted every day to invade Beirut, to gain a few inches. They failed completely. They realized they would not be able to occupy West Beirut except with the very highest casualties. Therefore they took the decision to destroy Beirut. that might lead to killing the chairman and our leadership, and I think that was on Sharon's mind more than anything else.

So. really, my being here was to help — always, of course, through the Arab ambassadors. I mean, we could not talk directly to the State Department. And the problem was to get our messages to Habib and back. So we would receive the messages from Chairman Arafat and then we would go to the Arab ambassadors, they would go to the State Department, and the State Department would send the messages to Habib through the American Embassy there. Even though this was a very complicated route, the messages would sometimes reach Habib 6 to 7 hours before the same message would reach him across the firing line.

It might be interesting for you to know that the last 14 days of killing and destruction were utterly politically needless, because the agreement that we finally reached was exactly the agreement we reached with Habib by Aug. 3. That was the agreement that finally stuck and it was the Israelis who finally had to make the concessions. The 14 days in between were days of needless, heartless.

Criminal killing.
Q: Did the State Department ever come back through the Arab ambassadors to you asking for

A: We had several channels to the State Department, through the Arab ambassadors and through other independent channels. And of course they were all legal, because they were all people who could meet with the State Department. And we did receive messages through these channels. But that does not in any way violate the Kissinger "trick" (of preventing U.S. officials from talking to the PLO until the PLO meets U.S. prerequisites.) I also want to make it clear that the State Department always deferred to Habib. They held him in great esteem and did not want to detract from his authority to be the chief handler of the matter.

Q: Do you think Habib will now go on to become a negotiator for the larger Middle East negotiations? A: Probably. I think, unless his health prevents him from doing that. You know, he's a man who has had 2 heart attacks before. I think he learned a lot while he was doing this. In the beginning, we all felt he was very negative toward the Palestinian point of view, and we all felt that he was more sympathetic to the Israel-Phalangist point of view. But as things went along, he got a taste of Israeli intransigence, and he got a taste of the real objectives of the Israelis. I think he did, undoubtedly, being a very intelligent man and a veteran negotiator himself. take more and more an objective point of view and a fairly reasonable attitude. He did come around eventually, with all the built-in American biases toward Israel. He managed to come out with an agreement that we helped very much. We helped him reach that agreement, and we respected it and implemented it to the letter. We helped him succeed in no small way, and we are not unhappy about this. I think we came out victorious and definitely with a political edge, and we saved as much as we could of Beirut. Q: What is your strategy, as special PLO envoy here, to change the American position toward the

A: It's tough, but we have to be here. The Israelis are here in force. They consider this their own home territory, and I think they ought to be dislodged for the good of this country. I have no secret theory as to how to dislodge the Israeli power from this country. We are, by the way, very sympathetic to a lot of the brave people of the Jewish community in this country who are now questioning their very lobby, and who are questioning what Israel is doing. Every day you look at the TV. and you read the papers -today there is an article in The Washington Post about establishment of American Jews who are seriously questioning what happened. Our role is to just explain. We do not want to make any publicity gimmicks, manipulations, or stunts, just to be there to meet with people and explain, to tell them the facts without even innuendoes.

Q: What about the press reports of the PLO turning over their heavy weaponry to the Lebanese National Movement groups. Isn't that a violation of the agreement?

A: Well. I really have no information here about this, but I would say - and I handled the telexes myself personally — that there was nowhere in the agreement that stipulated to whom these arms should be turned over. It was a voluntary statement on the part of the PLO, saying O.K., if you insist we leave our weapons, we will give them as a gift to the Lebanese Army. But where is the Lebanese Army? We have only a few days left in Beirut, and there is absolutely no Lebanese Army that even showed up at the checkpoints. The Lebanese Army so far is embroiled in the difficulties of making a true

Lebanese united army representing all the people.
Things were made even more difficult by the election of Bashir Gemayel. Admittedly this is an internal Lebanese matter, but the way it was handled, and the game that was played to make it look like a democratic choice while under Israeli bayonets and arms in an occupied country. How do you handle this? Do you hand your arms over to Mr. Bashir Gemayel, when he supported the enemy, and before then was a major killer? Of course, people may reform, but before that you don't give them all your weapons and hope that they will reform.

Swedish tranquillity marred by violence

STOCKHOLM (AP) - Burning signs. firebombs and other anti-immigrant activity shattered the usual summer tranquility this year in Sweden, a nation in which natives and immigrants have traditionally had good Worried authorities have sent special police patrols onto downtown Stockholm's streets and have set up special programs to educate Swedes and non-Swedes about immigration. Immigrants and their children, many of them Swedish citizens, number 1.1 million among Sweden's 8.3 million inhabitants. Most come from Finland. Yugoslavia. Greece and Turkey, but a large number of Latin Americans came here in the 1970s.

Incidents that began in late July have carried the mark of the Ku Klux Klan, a secretive. anti-black society in the United States, and the Skinheads, groups of head-shaven young toughs who participated in race riots in Britain in the summer of 1981.

- In Segeltorp, a Stockholm suburb, a Chilean family who fled their home country after the 1973 military takeover found a burning cross on their front yard, symbol of the white supremacist Klan, which traces its origins to the southern United States.

Since that incident, three more crosses were found in or near residential areas where many immigrants live. While authorities say there is a KKK presence in Sweden, there is no evidence that it is linked to any U.S. klan, its membership is believed to be tiny.

- In early August, Swedish thugs in Trollbecken south of the capital attacked a kiosk owned by Turkish immigrants. They smashed windows and doors with steel bars, yelling racial slurs. "We were terrified. We feared for our lives," owner Ozcan Sen told reporters. He said he hid on the floor during the

In Kumla, 160 kilometers to the west, an immigrant, who had been harassed repeatedly, shot and seriously wounded a 14-year-old boy by mistake in late August. Other attacks have included stabbings, property damage and fire bombs thrown into bars frequented by young immigrants. Police say many of the assaults were carried out by Swedish Skinheads, youngsters who shave their heads, wear heavy boots and say they "simply don't like immigrants."

with representatives of the immigrant community to discuss how to curb the violence. 'We will cooperate closely with school boards and youth organizations to inform youngsters about immigration." Immigration Ministry spokesman Tommy Westerteg told the Associated Press.

"Obviously, racist violence is overshadowed in the election campaign by other issues." Westerneg said referring to parliamentary elections scheduled Sept. 19. The campaign has centered on economic issues. In a newspaper article, former immigration board director Kjell Oberg accused the authorities of not taking seriously immigrant complaints of harassment.

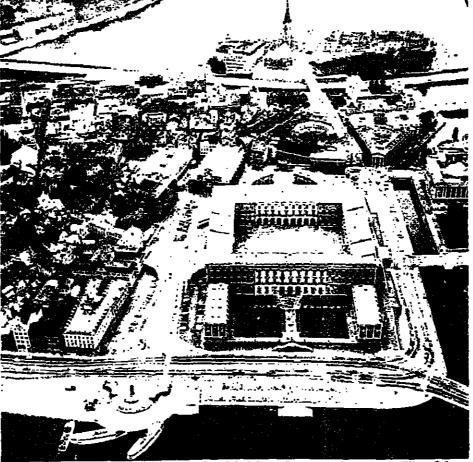

Sen, the Turkish kiosk owner. complained that it took police two hours to arrive, but police denied it. They said two officers were dispatched to the scene after half an hour. To underline their concern, authorities have assigned more policemen to patrol downtown Stockholm on weekends to prevent fights between Skinheads and youth gangs of foreign descent.

Some people, such as Polish immigrant Jerzy Szarnecki, an official of the crimeprevention council, say the racist attacks are isolated incidents. Szarnecki said he has seen no evidence of increasing anti-immigrant sentiment in Sweden. Social workers have blamed the problems on lack of jobs for large numbers of youth and few leisure activities during the summer. But Lajos Szecsi, himself a Hungarian and director of the Immigrants' Culture Center, argued neither unemployment nor boredom is a new phenomenon. "Actually, subtle racist tendencies exist among large segments of the population, but they very seldom lead to violence." he said in an interview.

He said massive media coverage of the attacks may have lured some youths to do things they otherwise would not have done. "You read about police reinforcements to curb violence, ministerial crisis meetings and so on, and that can give inspiration to some guys," Szecsi argued. "Still, I do not think this is by any means a mass psychosis. Sweden is after all a tranquil country, and this probably will be over in a couple of weeks."

He accused politicians of neglecting the problems, claiming "all they do is issue statements, promising to do something."

Kampuchean refugees getting 'doom letters'

By Catherine Campbell

KAMPUT CAMP, Thailand (R) -Kampuchean refugees at the Kamput Camp in eastern Thailand are starting to receive what aid workers call "doom letters" terse official notes telling the refugees that their applications to live in the United States have been rejected.

The Kampucheans who learned this week that the U.S. had turned them down were deeply disappointed and also baffled. Most of them have been living in United Nations-run camps in Thailand for more than three years. During that time, they have seen tens of thousands of their contrymen, including relatives, being accepted by the United States, and leaving the camps for new lives in the West.

But the rules have changed. The U.S. administration adopted this year a strict new guideline defining who should qualify as a genuine refugee and therefore could be accepted under the U.S. refugee program. Many of the Kampucheans at Kamput Camp, who number more than 20,000 are discovering that they do not qualify.

The U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) recently began interviewing the Kampucheans in Kamput Camp to see who qualified for resettlement. About 1,800 people have been rejected, almost half of those interviewed so far, refugee

"The INS is applying the new guideline to the letter, and that means that many Kampucheans do not fit the definition of a refugee as someone with a well-founded fear of being persecuted if he returned to his

The INS contended that many of the Kampucheans could now go back to their homeland, occupied by Vietnamese troops who toppled the Khmer Rouge government in 1979, and were therefore merely "economic refugees" scheming to get into the U.S., the official said.

But Kampucheans in Kamput said that it was impossible for them to go home. Anyone who fled from Kampuchea will be treated like a traitor if he goes back, said a young man who had just learned that he and his family had been rejected by the U.S. although he had a brother working in New York Čitv.

Before the U.S. imposed the new guidelines, anyone from Indochina who had fled his homeland was considered by the U.S. as a refugee. More than 385,000 Kampucheans, Laotians and Vietnamese have been resettled from Thai camps to the West since 1975, the majority to the U.S., according to U.N. figures.

Under the new rules, refugees with the best chance of being accepted by the U.S. are those having connections with the U.S. backed governments in Indochina before 1975, the year of the Communist Khmer rouge takeover in Kampuchea.

Ironically, the INS considers refugees with family already in the U.S. As most suspect of trying to enter the U.S. on the coat-tails of their relatives to avoid the economic hardships in Indochina. refugee officials said.

The INS was rejecting well over half the Kampucheans in Kamput Camp with close relatives in the U.S., the officials added The INS has declined to comment on its work at Kamput.

The "doom letters" to the rejected Kampucheans, signed by a U.S. Embassy official, conclude: "urge you to seek resettlement in another country."

A refugee official said: "Australia, Canada and France have accepted some of those rejected by the U.S., but their quotas are nearly full. If the U.S. rejection rate continues at this level there will be many people left behind in Kamput."

The rejected Kampucheans in Kamput Camp react to the news that they are not wanted with the stubborn patience born of years of waiting. "The Americans took my sister last year." one young man said wearily. "Some day they will take me too."

Red China jittery over Hong Kong

HONG KONG (LOS) - By 1977, says a prominent Chinese geomancer here, Hong Kong will be a special economic zone of China, with a locally born Chinese as governor and a "behind the curtain" boss in Pek-

Such is the mood of uncertainty that the predictions of the ancient science of Fung Shui are considered neither more nor less believable than those offered almost daily by a variety of "politically informed" sources.

At a time in which the delicious ambiguity of the Shanghai Communique Mark 2 enabled Peking and Washington to shelve the contentious issue of continuing U.S. arms sales to Taipei, those who do not live in Hong Kong might be forgiven for wondering what the fuss is all about.

The fundamental problem is that the date 1997, when Britain's legal authority over all save a small portion of the territory expires. has been seared on to the public consciousness. Setting aside the unquestionably important legal requirements of mortgages and medium to long-term investments, local and foreign businessmen are demanding more than reassuring generalities. If they are not forthcoming soon, their money will go elsewhere and Hong Kong's prosperity and social stability will collapse.

For 30 years all that was required of China has been that they do nothing," said a government official. "Much as they might wish it, that is no longer enough."

Since January this year, and the visit of Britain's then Foreign Office Secretary of State Humphrey Atkins, the Peking leadership has addressed itself to the problem. And judging from official pronouncements, leaks. and the comments of "fellow travelers" in Hong Kong, they already have the outline of their favored solution.

They want Britain to acknowledge Chinese sovereignty over all of Hong Kong. There will be no question of a distinction between parts ceeded "in perpetuity" and parts "leased" for 99 years. Neither is there any possibility of an extended lease. No Chinese government could endure the shame of endorsing "unequal treaties" signed by the decaying Ching dynasty.

They also want to maintain the stability and prosperity of Hong Kong, its status as a free port, and its freewheeling capitalist economy, with the huge amounts of foreign exchange earnings, and the expertise and sexvices it makes available to China. Lenin is quoted to justify the formulation of "one state, two systems."

The difficulty, to quote a Chinese language newspaper here, could be " I want a fish and a bear's paw but I cannot get them both." The crucial and unresolved question is the relationship between "sovereignty" and

There are those in Peking and in the Hong Kong branch of the Chinese Communist Party who would like to dismantle the British administration and run Hong Kong like a supercharged version of the Shen Zhen new economic zone just north of the border.

Unfortunately, says one of the territory's leading bankers. "Shen Zhen is a shambles, and Hong Kong just would not work under a Chinese administration,"

According to government officials the task is to educate the Chinese leadership in this fact. " Hong Kong is used to the rule of law, to a reasonably sensible administration, and a measure of freedom. The past 30 years of Chinese history does not inspire confidence, and confidence, especially business confidence, is vital," said one official.

British negotiators will seek a "minimum amount of change to produce a new constitutional base for Hong Kong, at a pace which does not inspire alarm and despondency."

In other words, the status quo would be dressed in a new suit of clothes cut to Peking's taste, but sufficiently comfortable and durable for Hong Kong to wear well beyond 1979, Chinese sovereignty and British administration.

Superior technology, cannon and grapeshot, won Britain's footbold on South China in the first place and the prime hope is that the modern weapons of influence, investment, foreign exchange, financial, scientific and industrial skills, should be enough to keep her there.

Any expectation, however, that Premier Margaret Thatcher will return from her visit to Peking this month with more than a minimum declaration of common ground, perhaps an agreement for direct consultations, is, officials say, misplaced. The preoccupation with the Falklands has delayed preparatory contacts on the issue of Kong's URUMQI. Xinjiang Province. (LOS) -"The leaders are always telling us to separate fact from fiction. You want to hear the big fact about this province? For us the Communist victory has been a disaster. So says a young woman engineer, one of the Uighur people who live in China's far west, close to the border with the Soviet Union.

Since the Communist takeover in 1949, the Uighurs claim that the best jobs the best housing, and the lion's share of food in Xinjiang has gone to outsiders, members of the country's dominant ethinic group, the Hans. who have flooded into the area.

"I'm an irrigation engineer." the Uighur woman said. "We have chronic drought in Xinjiang but before the Hans came we usually had enough to eat. Then in 1959. 1960 and 1961 we had the three terrible years because of stupid Peking policy. A lot of people here starved to death. I travel all over Xinjiang and I can see people are pretty hungry in the countryside. but the government moves in food from other provinces and buys grain from abroad. But if most of the Hans left there'd be plenty to eat.

Xinjiang has never been fully integrated with the rest of: China. It became an imperial province only in 1873 and in 1930 was the setting for a Muslim uprising which eventually rocked neighboring provinces and was suppressed only after brutal counterattacks by security forces.

As late as last year disorders shook the city of Kashgar after a young Chinese shot dead a Uighur during a quarrel. Four Hans were killed by outraged Uighurs and hundreds were injured.

The police separated the groups late that day." a Uighur said. "If the army had been called in the fighting would still be going on, but they still haven't tried the Chinese who killed the Uighur!" When asked what they would tell Chairman Hu Yaobang and Premier Zhao Ziyang. if asked for their opinions on how to improve matters in this province, the young Uighurs burst out laughing.

NEW DELHI (Depthnews) — The fate of India's first multipurpose satellite seems to be well "still in orbit."

After INSAT 1A was launched from Cape Canaveral in the United States early this year, the satellite is yet to become operational. Though its jammed C-band antenna was released by Indian space scientists, its "solar sail" remains stuck. The solar sail is designed to counterbalance the array of solar panels on one side of the satellite and give it stability.

The 1.150-kilogram INSAT 1A is the first of two identical satellites of the first generation Indian National Satellite System. It is the first multipurpose satelliet to be put in geostationary orbit (it remains fixed above a certain area on earth, like India in this case, and remaining above that area even as the earth revolves. It combines three functions in one: It will route long-distance telephone calls, relay radio and television programs and keep an eye on the weather - all at the same time. The satellite was built by an American firm. but its design is essentially the brainchild of Indian space scientists. Its triple function capability is based on an internal study by the Department of Science and Technology. The satellite was built according to specifications provided by the Indian Space Research

The satellite's telecommunication and TV transponders have been successfully tested. Its meteorological equipment has already relayed high quality cloud pictures. Unfortunately, there appears to be some delay in setting up the necessary ground facilities for the commissioning of INSAT.

INSAT has 12 transponders for telecommunication needs and two transponders for TV: It also carries a very high resolution radiometer for meteorological observation and a meteorological data relay channel. It is a joint venture of the Department of Space, the Posts and Telegraphs Department the Indian Meteorological Department, Doordarshan and All India Radio.

The INSAT ground segment comprises 31 earth stations and terminals set up by the P and T department. Five of the large teleDelhi, Bombay, Calcutta, Madras and Shillong. There are also 13 medium earth stations, 11 remote area terminals and three transportable emergency terminals.

Meteorological data from INSAT is to be received and processed at the Meteorological data Utilization Center (MDUC) in New Delhi. The India Meteorological Department is setting up a network of over 100 immanned data collection platforms in remote areas which will send meteorological data to the MDUC via INSAT:

The greatest benefit from INSAT will perhaps be reaped by the P and T department. The satellite will provide more than 4,000 high grade two-way telephone channels for inter-city traffic. At the moment, trunk traffic between major cities is carried mainly by microwave and underground coaxial cable systems. INSAT provides a third network of high-grade trunk circuits.

The main advantage of trunk circuits via satellite, says B.S. Murty, general manager of the satellite projects of the P and T department, "is that they are essentially "two hop" circuits. That is, one hop from the originating station to the satellite and the second hop from the satellite to the destination. In the case of a terrestrial microwave system, there could be as many as 50 hops in a distance of 2.000 km and the failure of any one hop will result in total system failure.

Another advantage f a satellite system is its "illuminates" the whole country, communication can be established with any place within this area by establishing a suitable earth station at that place. In case of emergencies like floods or cyclones, communication can be provided quickly for the stricken area by transporting to it emergency communication terminals.

A major function of INSAT will be television broadcasting. Technically the satellite is capable of providing television service to the entire country for 12 hours daily. But inadequate planning will initially limit it to 45 minutes of educational programs and one hour of "development" programs. This, many feel, would be a colossal waste of INSAT is equipped with a high-power S-band antenna for television signals which can be picked up by specially designed TV receivers. The advantage of such a facility is that TV service can be provided to any part of the country without a TV transmitter. This, says N.L. Chawla who has been actively involved with the INSAT project, "opens up tremendous possibilities for a country like India. No other country has utilized satellite TV on such an extensive scale as aid to economic and social development and to promote national and emotional integration as we have planned for."

But, says Chawla, "the task is indeed challenging, both in the application of technology and in software planning and distribution. Today TV transmission in India claims only about 15 percent of the population and that, too, largely in urban centers. The primary objective beofre INSAT-TV now is to reach the rural areas."

Initially, INSAT will provide TV service to selected village clusters in six states — Andhra Pradesh, Orissa, Maharashtra, Bihar, Gujarat and Uttar Pradesh. The plan is to install 8,000 direct-reception sets and about 7,000 conventional sets for community viewing in the six states. But initially only about 350 direct-reception sets are to be pro-

Weather forecasting is likewise expected to become faster and more reliable after the satellite becomes operational. But here, too, ground facilities are not yet ready. Of the hundred or so unmanned data collection platforms proposed to be set up by the Indian Meteorological Department, only eight are likely to be ready by the end of this year.

Also, the much publicized "disaster warning system" will not be ready before 1984. In fact, the special receiver sets to be used are still in the developmental stage. Their manufacture is not likely to start before the end of next year.

The possibilities with INSAT are many. But most will remain unused for a long time because of inadequate planning. This is a most unfortunate waste of the taxpayers' 15%-50% OFF

Shopping for Western technology

Romania plans nuclear power program

VIENNA (R) — Romania. hit by stagnant oil production, plans an ambitious nuclear power program in a drive to be self-sufficient in energy by 1990.

The country used to be a major oil exporter. But in 1979 home demand outstripped production. That, in part, led to the decision to invest heavily in nuclear reactors, which involves shopping for some of the technology in the West.

Only two reactors are so far being built. both at Cernavoda near the Black Sea port of Constanta, with the first due for commissioning in 1985. But the government plans to have 20 reactors by the end of the century. By then Cernavoda itself is planned to have five 660-megawatt Canadian reactors of the Candu type. They burn unenriched uranium so Romania will not need to set up its own costly enrichment process or send uranium for processing in the Soviet Union before it can operate Cernavoda.

But reliance on Western suppliers, with Canadian firms supplying reactor equipment and a U.S.-Italian consortium providing generators; has meant the Cernavoda plant is among victims of current Romanian financial troubles.

With Bucharest negotiating the future of some $10 billion of debt with Western banks and governments this year. Canada decided to freeze a credit line of $1 billion for buying reactors until the state of the economy is Canada's Export Development Corporation said in May it was holding in abeyance $648 million granted to Romania for reactor purchases after disbursing $40 million. Commercial banks have already paid out the $320 million they agreed to lend as part of the credit line.

But Romania is making progress in the debt talks. In July, Western creditor governments agreed to reschedule $480 million of the This month commercial banks are to reply to a Romanian request to delay repayments of $2.32 billion of money owed them this year and last, after studying detailed, optimistic forecasts supplied by Bucharest.

The energy program was described recently by the official press. It is clear that Romanian planners also envisage nuclear plants in Transylvania and Moldavia, although less has been published about these.

The Transylvania plant will be similar to Cernavoda, probably consisting of Candu reactors. One or two reactors are supposed to start operation by 1990.

Romania will cooperate with the Soviet Union on the Moldavia station, probably using three 1,000-megawatt Soviet VVER reactors, mentioned by Romanian Prime Minister Constantin Dascalescu at a recent session of the Comecon trade bloc.

The VVER is a pressurized light water reactor, already widely used in the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe. Romania has already agreed to help build a Soviet nuclear station at Konstantinovka, in the Ukraine, and a line linking the plant with the Balkans. from which it will draw electric power, Behind the bid for nuclear power are statistics that show Romanian crude oil output has declined in recent years: down in 1981 to 11.6 million tons (230,000 barrels daily) after 1976 and 1977 peaks of 14.7 million tons (295,000 barrels daily).

Romania pours much of its crude into a huge refining industry it built up during the 1970s. That industry now has a capacity of about 30 million tons a year (600,000 barrels daily), forcing Romania to scour the world market for crude oil to keep it in business. In 1979, for instance, the country turned to the Soviet Union for crude oil, after earlier underlining a degree of economic independence by staying out of preferential Soviet crude contracts offered to members of the Comecon East European economic

During the 1970s, rising demand for oil products made it sensible to invest heavily in refineries - Western oil companies were doing the same thing at the time. But the current recession-led slump in demand for oil products in the West, where Romanian refined products filtered through, has hit the While aiming to burn less oil in generating electricity. Romania is also trying to boost its own crude production, prospecting for new fields in the Black Sea making more use of advanced technology to win more oil from existing wells.

We must break through to a higher level of technology and achieve the competence to work that technology. Then we shall ensure security in a competitive world," said Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew recently.

Legislator Chandra Das says the country should map its future around the concept of "microprocessors in a global garden city."

The government hopes to achieve greater efficiency, but economic planners hope software manufacturing will help the country move away from labor-intensive industries toward a high-tech future.

panies with some connection to computers have opened in the last two years, bringing the total to 195. Nine of the new ones manufacture hardware. 29 are involved with software and 72 are agents, retailers or distributors, Tan said.

Seven ministries and government departments and 14 statutory boards have their own computer systems. Four of them added new equipment and six had new systems installed in the last 10 months.

A $7.4 million software technology center is on the drawing boards to house the National Computer Board and selected software firms. Plans have been announced to use computers to track down such uncooperative citizens as litterbugs and those who hop from job to job.

The government has earmarked $46.5 million to computerize its offices. About $140,000 is allocated to finance loans for civil servants to buy personal computers for home practice.

West German railways being blackmailed

STUTTGART, West Germany. (AFP) --West German rialways are being blackmailed to the tune of three million Deutsche marks ($1.200,000) by a man threatening to derail a

The company has appealed to the public for help in identifying the voice of the blackmailer. Members of the public can listen to a tape recording of the blackmailer making his demands by dialing any of three telephone numbers given by police.

Already 11,000 callers have answered the appeal for information, in the hope of winning the 5,000 mark ($2,000) reward offered by the railway company. Police Friday said they had 33 possible lines of investigation but nothing definite to go on yet.

The affair goes back to Aug. 9 when the Bundesbank management received a letter saying a train would be derailed unless the company paid two million marks ($800,000). During the following few days a go-between was ordered on four different occasions to take the ransom money to various spots along the highways and roads surrounding Stuttgart but the blackmailer failed to show up. On Aug. 24, several heavy tree branches were laid across the railway line between Stuttgart and Tuebingen. But the express train passed over them without incident.

Three days later, the blackmailer believed to be between 20 and 30 years of age and from Stuttgart region, phoned a local newspaper complaining that the police had interfered with his arrangements for receiving the

Thereupon he raised his demands to three million marks and also claimed responsibility for a collision between a passenger and a goods train near Frankfurt on Aug. 26 in which 23 persons were injured.

Last Monday, the blackmailer's new demands were confirmed in a letter to the railways. Police became anxious that the man might carry out his threats after he failed to renew contact with the go-between.

It is West German's second mass blackmailing within a few weeks. Last July 19. the Hamburg Water Board received a letter demanding $2 million from blackmailers threatening to poision drinking water.

lexico state-trade rift surfaces

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 4 (AP) - President Jose Lopez Portillo's expropriation of Mexican private banks reveals a rift between the government and its important business sector and does little to restore confidence in the nation's unsteady economic future.

U.S., allies sign accord on sea-mining

PARIS, Sept. 4 (AFP) - Four Western nations this week signed an interim agreement regulating prospection for deep sea mineral resources by private companies, the French Foreign Ministry announced Saturday.

The agreement is concerned particularly with polymetallic nodes which are found on the ocean floor in the form of black pebbles. They are composed of iron, manganese, nickel, copper, cobalt and titanium.

The main source of the nodes is the Indian Ocean, but they are also found in the northern Pacific and even in the Canadian and Siberian lakes.

The agreement signed in Washington Thursday by the United States, France, West Germany and Britain, is designed to facilitate the settlement of conflicts arising from claims for concessions made before march 1982. The signatories have pledged themsevles to encouraging out of court settlements or alternatively arbitration.

NEW YORK, Sept. 4 (R) - Salomon Brothers Inc declined to comment on rumors its chief economist Henry Kaufman was telling clients he now was looking for lower interest rates over the near term.

"We are not commenting on rumors," a spokesman said. Similar rumors emerged Thursday, but the spokesman denied Kaufman was speaking to clients and that be had changed his outlook.

On Aug. 17 Kaufman forecast lower interest rates over the next 12 months. He subsequently said short-term rates would rise over the near term, but he did not alter his longterm view.

Serving dual purpose

Peking's free marts blossom PEKING, Sept. 4 (AFP) - Free markets.

an institution revived in Communist China since 1978 with the dual purpose in stimulating agricultural production and making up for notorious failings in the state distribution system, are now in full flow. The English langauge China Daily reported Friday that there are over 43,000 free markets both in the urban and rural areas providing for more than 10 percent of national retail trade.

They were first set up with orders to limit transactions to food, specifically to vegetables, eggs and poultry produced by the peasant on his private plot.

But the free markets have gradually gone beyond their original brief. Many have thus become veritable bazaars, offering furniture, agricultural tools, handicrafts, or even consumer goods whose sale is mainly reserved for state stores. The China Daily recalled that it was strictly forbidden to sell antiques, jewelry, precious stones, coins or non-ferrous metals in the free markets.

Prices in the private sector are generally higher than state prices but quality is also superior, and often the goods are not available in state stores. Last year, each Chinese citizen spent an average of 38 yuan ($19) in the free markets, the China Daily said, adding that total turnover for this year would be around 35,000 million yuan ($17.7 billion). Last year, the figure was 28,700 million yuan ($15 billion).

The paper cited the case of family in the coastal province of Fujian who earned more than 800 yuan ($400) last year - which is more than the annual salary of a worker - selling poultry on the free market. This money-making by peasants frequently reported by the official press, does not go without provoking some resentment among the urban population. Because of this citizens

INRO to change: operation tactics

KUALA LUMPUR, Sept. 4 (AFP) -Future price-supporting interventions by the International Natural Rubber Organization (INRO) in the rubber market will be "unpredictable" in order to discourage speculation, INRO's acting chairman Nelson Mgowewo of Nigeria said bere Saturday.

At the end of the 34-member councils two-day special session, he said the council, had noted that the International Natural rubber Agreement (INRA) provided INRO buffer stock manager with sufficient discre-tion and flexibility to operate in a less predictable way.

However, speculators had been watching the trend of his operations which had become predictable in recent months and it was agreed he should change the pattern of his : price stabilizing purchases.

Wall Street Rally too good to be true, analysts say

NEW YORK. Sept. 4 (AP) - The traditional September "business new year" has arrived amid rapidly mounting hopes on Wall Street for better times ahead in the United States economy.

There are still many doubters, and the current readings on the state of the economy look anything but bright, with the unemployment rate stuck at a post-World War II high of 9.8 percent. But the stock market, which began hinting last month at the possibility of a recovery, now seems almost to be insisting on it.

The rally in stock prices that began mor, e than three weeks ago -- on what turned out to be a very lucky Friday the 13th for some investors — was running as strong as ever as the past week drew to a close.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials jumped 41.66 points to 925.13 over the week, capping off the advance with a 15.73 jump Friday on the third heaviest sincleday volume in history.

In 16 days of what one broker called "a textbook buying panic," the widely recognized indicator of stock price trends has soared 148.21 points, or 19 percent, recouping more than half its losses in the bear market of the previous year and a half. Before Aug. 18, the New York Stock Exchange had never seen a day in which 100 million shares changed hands. Since then, there have been six, including the peak day of 137.33 on Aug. 26.

In the past three weeks, the NYSE's composite index has risen from 59.54 to 70.26. At the American Stock Exchange, where activity hasn't been quite so frantic, the market value index has nevertheless climbed from 237.54 to 285.08.

To many a suspicious market analyst, the story looks all too good to be true. As the Value Line Investment survey told its subscribers Friday, "we can only wounder what discovery is the basis for all this optimism among equity investors."

On Thursday morning, one broker remarked, "markets tend to be histrionic and to distract people from what is really going on in the economy. I'm advising people not to get caught up in the euphoria." But many investors appeared to scorn such

Allies against meeting Buckley shrouded

NEW YORK. Sept. 4 (AP) - Britain. France. West Germany and Italy are refusing to meet U.S. undersecretary of State James Buckley on the dispute over the Soviet gas pipeline because they want an American of a higher rank, the New York Times said Friday.

The Times said Buckley was to have headed an American delegation which was to have flown to Europe this week. The State Department refused to comment on the report. However, a department's spokesman told Reuters: Mr. Buckley didn't have any plans to go to Europe."

The Times said the decision by the four not to meet Buckley would set back by at least several days a renewed mediation effort that was to have started early next week.

President Reagan is ordered sanctions against firms supplying equipment for the pipeline, causing a major dispute between Washington and the four nations.

The Times said the European officials wanted Reagan to send an emissary of cabinet rank and said there were rumors that he would send Secretary of State George Shultz. The Times said another problem was that Reagan would order special trade Representative. Bill Brock, to remain in Glasgow

Rumors that Iran and Iraq agreed not to bomb each other's oil installations brought an immediate pause on the market Thursday. On Friday, charterers were awaiting confirmation and consequential fall in rates from their current 3-year and high.

But nothing was confirmed, and fresh inquiry was circulating in front of the weekend to lift oil at its reduced price. #### Oslo to devalue kroner by 3%

OSLO, Sept. 4 (AFP) — Norway, facing its highest unemployment since World War II, will devalue its currency to give Norwegian industry a greater competitive edge in international markets, it was announced Saturday.

Finance Minister Rolf Presthus said the three percent devaluation of the kroner would be effective next Monday. Labor opposition leader Gro Harlem Brundtland said she welcomed the devaluation as a means of curbing unemployment, which last month approached 44,000 in Norway.

Union leaders generally viewed the devaluation favorably. Labor union federation president Tor Halvorsec said it could alleviate unemployment, but feared the positive effects might be neutralized by mounting inflation. He said price controls should have been included.

Paal Kraby, administrative head of the employers' organization, said Norwegian companies that had borrowed abroad in foreign currencies would suffer from devaluation.

Tiny earthworm foils powerful Norman's bid for outright lead

ASCOT. England. Sept. 4 (AP) — A tiny earthworm cost Australian Greg Norman the outright lead in the $204,000 European Open Golf Championship over the 6,563 yard. par 70. old course at Sunningdale Friday.

The powerful Australian was put off his stroke as the worm emerged from the ground as he was driving off the seventh tee. The hole cost Norman a double bogey six in a round of 70 and at 134 and six under par he goes into the final 36 holes level with Scotland's Sandy

A best-of-the-day 66 by Lyle set up a confrontation between two of the biggest hitters on the European circuit, who currently occupy top places on the money list. The two leaders are chased by another Australian. Rodger Davis, 67, and Spaniard Manuel Pinero, 68, with totals of 136.

Norman, who could do nothing wrong in his first round Thursday, confessed Friday that his concentration was "absolutely terrible" and he was so embarrassed by the worm incident that he did not even tell his caddie about it. "I knew nobody would believe me," he said. "But this worm really did put me off. It came up out of the ground just as I was taking the club-head back and I caught the ball

The tee shot went low and only 20 yards into a steep bank in front of the tee. From there Norman took three more to reach the green and then two-putted.

Conservative play paid off for Lyle, though he reaped the reward for aggression at the first where his metal driver powered the ball over 300 yards, after which he hit a five-iron to the green and sank a 15-footer for an eagle

The 494-yard, par 5 first yielded an even better score for Tony Jacklin. After his drive he smashed a two-iron 225 yards straight into the cup for an albatross two. Jacklin could not keep up the momentum, however, and finished with a 68 for 141.

Severiano Ballesteros, pre-tournament favorite, took a seven at the 12th, where he needed three shot to get out of the heather, but he safely made the halfway cut with 73 for

Meanwhile, Fuzzy Zoeller streaked to a course record 9-under-par 62 Friday to grab a two-stroke lead over Calvin Peete at 12under 130 midway through the $275,000 B.C. Open at the En Joie Golf Club Endicott, Peete almost matched Zoeller's blazing pace by birdieing eight of the first 16 holes before a bogey-birdie finish left him with a round of 8-under 63 and a 36-hole total of 132. Jerry Pate was third at 133, with Tom Kite four shots behind the leader at 134 after his second straight round of 67.

Zoeller, 30, who won the 1979 Masters among his three tour victories, played almost wihtout a pause between shots. His error-free round - one shot shy of the best on the Professional Golfers Association tour this year — included nine birdies and nine pars. The previous 18-hole record on the 6,966yard municipal layout was 63 by Andy North in 1975 and Buddy Allin in 1976, both in Opening-day leader Mike Smith, whose 65 Thursday was good for a 2-shot edge over Pate and Kite, shot a 3-over 74 Friday to fall back into a eight-way logjam at 139. Pate coupled rounds of 67-66 to stay in the hunt, while Kite knocked four shots off par on his first 14 holes before bogeys on Nos. 15 and 17 nullified birdies on 16 and 18.

A total of 71 pros from the starting field of 156 made the cut at 1-over-par 143. Among them were Bobby Clampett, who led the British Open for three rounds this year, and tour money leader Craig Stadler. Clampett recovered from his earlier 74 with a 66 to qualify for further play, while Stadler shot

Missing the cut were Nick Price, who was second in the British Open, and Lee Trevino, whose comeback attempt after a month of inaction following back surgery sourced with rounds of 72-74.

Also plagued by back troubles the last 2 1/2 years. Zoeller said the problem had eased and showed it in best round of his profes-

Athletes irked over shuffle of 10,000m event

ATHÉNS. Sept. 4 (R) - Tension filled the air Saturday in advance of the European Athletics Championships over a decision to run the men's 10,000 meter. final on Monday instead of Thursday.

Notices posted at the brand New Olympic Stadium outside Athens said qualifying heats for the event had been scrapped and the final moved from Thursday to Monday evening. the opening session of the Games.

The decision angered athletes who arrived here aware that the qualifying round would be cancelled but expecting the final to be held as originally scheduled.

British team manager Nick Whitehead said he would be protesting "vigorously" to the organizers and would try to rally support from other teams for it to be changed. The decision apparently favored teams such as East Germany and Portugal with runners who wanted to "double up" and run the 5,000 meters as well.

The new stadium was full of athletes Saturday acquainting themselves with the 80.000-capacity arena. Most seemed enthusiastic about it despite the fact that workmen were still struggling to finish parts of the spectator facilities in time for the opening ceremony on Monday afternoon. Apart from the 10.000 meters, the highlight of Monday's program is likely to be the appearance of Britain's Sebastian Coe in the 800 meters heats, one of the clutch of events for which he holds the world record. Since returning from injury earlier this summer. Coe has stormed back to form in a series of races and is clear favorite to win the 800 meters title.

 $1\overline{t}$  was not clear whether he would also run the 1,500 meters, taking the place of compatriot Steve Ovett who hulled out of the championships with a hamstring injury. Other events on Monday are the women's shot put final and heats for the men's 100 meters and javelin and the women's 400 meters.

Mandy Jones pedals away with crown

GOODWOOD, England, Sept. 4 (AP) -Mandy Jones of Britain won the 61.2 kilometer women's road race at the World Cycling Championships here Saturday. Jones, 20. covered four gruelling laps through the undulating English countryside in one hour. 31 minutes and one second.

While Bernd Drogan of East Germany won men's amateur road race. Francis Vermaelen of Belgium was second with Jurg Bruggman of Switzerland third.

Drogan, a 26-year-old physical education student, covered the 12-lap (183.4kilometers - 114-mile) course in an unofficial time of 4 hours 17 minutes, 48 seconds. He led for the last three laps, just managing to hold onto his lead as the bunch closed in on the final circuit.Drogan became the first east German winner of the amateur race since Bernhard Eckstein triumphed in 1960.

Jones became Britain's first winner of the women's road race since Beryl Burton in 1967. Her previous best finish was third in 1980 in Sallanches. France. Marian Canins of Italy was second and Gerda Sierens of Belgium was third.

Canins and Sierens both were 10 seconds behind Jones, who led for the entire final lap. Sandra Schumacher of West Germany was fourth. 26 seconds behind the winner with last year's bronze medalist, Connic Carpenter of the United States, fifth - 42 seconds behind.

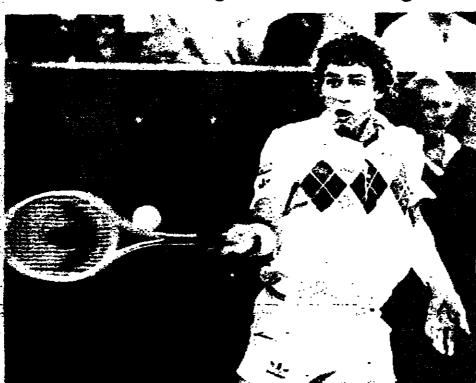

Jones, who in total led for more than half the race, broke away at the start of the final lap through the wooded Goodwood estate of Lord March. Canins. Sierens and Schumacher chased her gamely, but Jones' bold attacking play paid off. "I hung on going up the hill on the second to last lap, but then just went charging away on the last lap." she

The chasing group made headway on the climb the last time round, but Jones, her face showing the strain, grittily held on and crossed the finish line to roars of approval from the British crowd. Jones became Britain's first medalist of this year's championships.-

Swiss equestrian champ dies on track

LUHMUEHLEN, Northern Germany, Sept. 4 (AFP) — Swiss equestrian champion Ernst Baumann died here Saturday after falling from his horse during the World Military three-day event Championships here.

Baumann, 33, a member of the Swiss team which won the silver medal at the last European three-day event championships in Denmark, fell as he was about to clear the next to last obstacle in the showjumping contest. Witnesses said his horse. Beaujours de Mars, was so exhausted in the last third of the circuit that it stumbled against the fence and fell over, crushing Baumann's ribs.

ALL CONCENTRATION: Czech Ivan Lendl is all concentration while returning a forehand shot in a second round match against Tim Mayotte in the U.S. Open Champion-ship Friday. Lendl won 6-4, 3-6, 4-6, 7-6, 6-4.

Then Mayotte and Lendl took over the grandstand court and put on a pulsating show. The American, who reached the semifinals at Wimbledon, led after three sets and in 66 matches this year. She raced out to a 3-1 lead in the first set pefore dropping the next three games. With the score 6-5, Navratilova serving, Davis had set point at 30-40. But the Czechoslovakian-born left-hander won the next three points to hold serve, then took the tiebreaker 7-3. In the second set, Navratilova made only one unforced error and swept the final five games to close out the match.

In other early matches, eighth-seeded Eliot Teltscher easily stopped Cary Leeds 6-3, 6-1, 6-2; No. 10 Johan Kriek of South Africa downed Victor Amaya 7-6, 7-5, 7-5; No. 12 Steve Denton defeated Claudio Panatta of Italy 6-3, 6-2, 7-6, and veteran Ilie Nastase advanced to the third round with a 6-3, 6-4, 7-6 victory over Terry Moor.

Center of indoctrination

Reds rule the roost in Afghan university

NEW DELHI, Sept. 4 (AFP) - An Afghan university lecturer who fled his country last week has accused the Soviet-backed government of Babrak Karmal of turning the university into a virtual Communist indoctrination center. Azam Gul. a 49-year-old professor of agronomy who fled to India with his wife and six children. said his students were distracted by fear, and he himself had left after being hounded by the Afghan secret service.

"The university has become an academician's nightmare ... There is fear of military service, fear of the party members and fear of being killed or summarily executed... All these have turned the university into a center of the ruling Communists."

There were 85 "Soviet advisers" on the campus and not a single decision was taken without their approval. he said. "The appointment of teaching staff is cleared by no less a person than Prime Minister Sultan Ali Keshtmand after discussing each and every

But the Polish news agency PAP said an investigation had shown that "in none of the mentioned cases police used arms directly against participants" in the Wroclaw riots. Around the country the riots, marking the second anniversary of the independent union Solidarity, left hundreds of civilians and police injured, more than 4,000 persons ding to official reports. PAP also reported Saturday that district courts in Poland had sentenced 70 persons to prison terms ranging from several months to 1-2 years and/or fines of up to 40,000 zloties ($500) in the wake of the unrest.

As of Friday, magistrate courts had sentenced nearly 1,000 others to fines or prison terms of one to three months. PAP said.

Wroclaw was among the cities where the worst rioting occurred and in south of Lubin. a copper-mining town where two persons were shot and killed by police Tuesday. So far, the Lubin deaths are the only ones officially attributed to police.

Authorities began a crackdown on dissidents Friday in their first political move after the riots. They announced that four leaders of the dissident group KOR would be charged with seeking to overthrow communism in Poland by violence.

The four include Jacek Kuron. the unofficial leader of the group and Adam Michnik, Jan Litynski and Henryk Wujec. Wujec was also a top official in Solidarity's Warsaw chapter and an elected member of the union's national commission.

Most observers said the charges are the first salvo in a new onslaught against opposition by the nation's military rulers who are reacting angrily to Tuesday's disturbances.

The four members of KOR, or the Committee for Social Self-defense, founded in 1976 after riots and disbanded voluntarily in 1981 at the Solidarity congress, face sentences ranging from a minimum of five years in prison to case with the Soviets, with the result that party people with poor educational record are picked in preference to highly qualified non-party personnel."

The number of students had drastically phunged since Soviet troops intervened in Afghanistan in December 1979 and now only about half were left. Gul said.

Students who were party members were not required to attend classes and did not have to sit for entrance examinations, but roamed about on the campus intimidating people and asking other students to join the party. he

In 1978, when the Marxists first seized power in Afghanistan, Kabul University had over 9,500 students and 1,027 teachers. The only other university in Afghanistan. at Jalalabad, had 613 students and 75 teachers. Gul, who gained his bachelor's and master's degrees at the University of Wyoming in the United States and completed his doctorate at Washington State University, said he had constantly been harassed by agents of the Afghan secret service.

He said his house had been searched five times and his car stopped on several occasions. "They were trying to get some evidence against me and tried their best, but got nothing." Gul said the authorities had reduced the annual budget of the university from $4.8 million in 1979 to $3.8 million this Field work was no longer possible and laboratories for the science students no longer functioned. All development projects had been suspended and several departments had been closed down, he said.

He named several party members he said had been made faculty chiefs, adding that regular classes were being held to indoctrinate the students into the Communist ideology. "They call it political economy classes. and the duration is three hours a week and attendance for all students is compulsory." he

In the past, reports had trickled in from Afghanistan of the present government's effort to turn the university into a party institution. Gul's observation is considered by area analysts as the first concrete evidence

Since the Marxists came to power, no official statistics had come out giving the state of educational institutions in embattled Afghanistan. In 1978, there were 1.345 primary schools with 482,194 students, and 2,399 village and middle schools with 388.251 students. There were 197 high schools with 51.663 students, and 4,444 students in the country's 14 technical institutes.

The Afghan government has from time to time refuted charges that the educational institutions were being turned into political indoctrination centers for the ruling Peoples Democratic Party of Afghanistan.

Numerous statements have been broadcast over state-run Kabul radio accusing the "bandits" — official jargon for Muslim patriots fighting the government - of destroying schoolhouses and preventing students from attending university.

The newspaper, the only source of information besides the radio with the government restricting entry of Western newsmen, have carried photographs showing schoolhouses destroyed by the fighters.

The fighters have not disowned the government claims. They argue that the educational institutions were being used by the ruling party to indoctrinate new suppor-

Papandreou modifies foreign policy Greece should exchange ambassadors with the leftist regime on the tiny west Indian island of Grenada. He has dropped demands for a guarantee

Andreas Papandreou, an economics professor and American citizen before he entered politics in Greece, is a charistmatic leader noted for flexible policy-making.

During seven years in opposition, his

Panhellenic Socialist Movement (PASOK). the country's first Socialist Party, took a radical line and kept close links with Col. Muammar Qaddafi's regime in Libya and the Baath Socialists in Iraq and Syria.

But since winning a landslide election victory last October on a platform that called for leaving NATO and the EEC and closing American bases here, Papandreou has modified his foreign policy. He now seems to accept continuing Greece's traditional ties with the West, analysts say.

At the same time he has boosted contacts across the Arab world, and among nonaligned nations in pursuit of what he calls "a multi-dimensional foreign policy that serves the Greek national interests."

Yasser Arafat was the first foreign leader to make an official visit to Socialist Greece, last December. The Palestinian Liberation Organization (PLO) chief's arrival in Greece this week on the first stage of his exile from Lebanon reflects the close relationship that has grown up between the PLO and Greece, the only EEC country that doesn't fully recognize Israel.

Although Papandreou has also sent missions to mainstream Arab countries, his Middle East openings have brought few concrete results so far, in the form of much-needed Arab investment here.

Papandreou, 62, has developed relations with Mitterrand's Socialist France and with left-wing and nonaligned countries. He has visited Algeria, accepted an invitation to go to Cuba, and announced his intention that

Dali's paintings fetch $1 million

MADRID, Sept. 4 (AFP) - Spanish artist Salvador Dali has sold two of his paintings to the Spanish Culture Ministry for 100 million pesetas (about $1 million) and made a present of a third painting, the department of fine arts announced Saturday.

The two paintings, which the Ministry of Culture bought on July 31, were completed in 1927 and are crucial to understanding Dali's artistic evolution, officials said.

'Senicitas" is from the artist's surrealistic period and "Arlequin" represents his postcubist phase, they said.

Fine arts director Alfredo Perez de Arminan said that the Spanish government concluded a good bargain, considering the prices that works by the Catalonian artist have commanded recently. The most recent Dali painting put up auction, "The Mystery of Desire," sold for about $800,000 in London last February.

"Dalf's Three Glorious Riddles," which the artist gave to the Spanish government, was completed shortly before the death of his wife, Gala, last June. Since his wife's death, Dali has lived as a recluse at Pubol Castle, near Gerone, northern Spain, and King Juan Carlos recently conferred on the artist the title of "Marquis de Dali Pubol."

35 Indians drown

NEW DELHI, Sept. 4 (R) - At least 35 persons drowned when their boat capsized in a swollen river in the flood-devastated eastern Indian state of Orissa, police said Saturday. The boat was carrying the victims across the fast-flowing Vansadhara River when it capsized.

Reports reaching New Delhi said more than 30 million people in four northern and eastern states have been affected by heavy flooding. Over 60 persons have been killed so far and tens of thousands made homeless.

The floods in Orissa have hit 10 million people in eight of the state's 13 districts, the authorities said. Disrupted communications ruled out a full assessment of the disaster, an official report submitted to the central government said.

In the northern state of Uttar Pradesh, the Gauges and Ghaghra rivers submerged fresh areas in the eastern districts were some 4.700 villages are under water.

Nkomo feels kidnapped tourists may be alive BULAWAYO, Zimbabwe, Sept. 4 (AFP) - Zimbabwean minority leader Joshua Nkomo believes that six foreign tourists kidnapped some six weeks ago are still alive, "but I am not saying that they may not be dead," he told Agence France-Presse in an interview after a tour of the area.

However Nkomo, whom the kidnappers say they support, added that the six men - two Britons, two Australians and two Americans - could now be anywhere, even in Harare, following the failure of a large-scalearmy operation to find them.

Earlier, Nkomo had told the Bulawaye Chronicle newspaper that he had received information that the tourists had been seen somewhere some 10-12 days ago.

The kidnappers, thought to be renegade former members of Nkomo's preindependence guerrilla army, are demanding the release by Prime Minister Robert Mugabe's government of imprisoned leading members of Nkomo's Patroitic Front Party Nkomo was speaking after addressing railies in the Lupane and Nkayi tribal areas 150 kilomteres north of Bulawayo in Zimbabwe's southwest, the stronghold of his party.

Nkomo said that he had met earlier this week Army Cmdr. Rex Nhongo, who had agreed to suspend the operations of his 2.000 troops and police combing 2,000 square kilometers of Matabeleland.

Nkomo, who asked for the military to withdraw temporarily so that the kidnappers could release their prisoners, said that when he was in the area he had not met any troops.

The PF leader, whose party has been accused by the Mugabe's Zimbabwe African National Union (ZANU) members of subversion, said he had been acting for the good and the unity of Zimbabwe. "My mission was to motivate the people. They knew there had been some whites who had been taken away by armed men, but to them it was a government thing to recover them," he said.

of the country, you are part of Zimbabweand that is why you have got to play a part in seeing that those people do not die in our country." Nkomo said that he now thought that local people would pass on his message to the kidnappers if they saw them and arge them to give up their captives. "They were very responsive." he added.

He considered that Thursday's offer by the government of a 10,000 Zimbahwean dollar ($7,500) reward for information leading to the finding of the tourists, was "a recognition" of what he had done.

But he added that he might have to go to speak to people in other areas if it proved that the hunt was being concentrated in the wrong place. It was even possible, as certain persistent rumors had it, that the kidnappers hadfied into neighboring areas.

On his party's continued difficult relationship with the government. Nkomo said he had sent a letter to Mugabe asking for a joint meeting of ZANU and Patriotic Front leaders. "There are problems that you cannot solve by fighting, now that we are an independent country," he said in an appeal to his dissident former guerrilla who have been making armed attacks throughout Zimbabwe since his own dismissal from the government last-February. "The next thing we must do is to know what the problems are and talk to the other party." Nkomo added. He stressed that this included "the security situation that came about as a result of political misunderstandings.

Nkomo's appeals for a parliamentary commission to inquire into the wave of violence have so far been rejected by Mugabe. But herefused to "say anything that would make it-difficult for ZANU to move toward us."
